Did you know?

Forget Chopin and Madam Curie. To paraphrase Janet Jackson, what has Poland done for us lately? People all over the world have read the books, played the video games and even watched the films and TV series. But did you know The Witcher novels and short stories (well over a dozen to date) were written by Polish writer Andrzej Sapkowski. An entire Polish mini-industry was created as a result. Polish video game company CD Projekt created the games, graphic novels were published, and films and TV series were created first in Polish and eventually in English by Netflix with a long string of Polish directors and advisors, including Sapkowski himself, who is currently 76 years young and still creating!
